

We are all working to manage through this period of unprecedented change in healthcare. As our industry evolves more and more care is being delivered outside of the large acute care setting. This shift has highlighted the challenges associated with procurement without the tools needed to support the continuum of care. One approach could be to expand the footprint of the traditional ERP systems, but that option can be both costly and complex while still not delivering the innovation required to simplify workflow. The ideal solution must be cost-effective, offer a streamlined workflow and provide an organization the ability to advance its performance. SupplyCopia has applied its passion for cost savings and its technical expertise to develop just such a solution.
